Amethyst (North Carolina) CC: Silicon dioxide. H: 7. SG: 2.6. Cr: Hexagonal. Amethyst is a variety of quartz that is purple or "amethyst" in color, the result of traces of manganese. This single amethyst crystal occurred as a secondary growth on a plate of clear quartz crystals. It was in the several amethyst mines in North Carolina. Amethyst is the more select crystal gemstones.

ROCKS AND MINERALS

Summary

The book uses pictures and text to introduce rocks and minerals to students.

Introduce the Book

- Read the title on the front cover together. Have students think about what they know about rocks and minerals. Ask them to tell what they think they might learn about in this book. (RI.3.5, SL.3.1, SL.4.1, SL.5.1)
- Read the first section of the Introduction at the beginning of the book as students follow along. After you read each paragraph, have students restate the main ideas in their own words. (RI.3.2, SL.3.2, RI.4.2, SL.4.2, RI.5.2, SL.5.2)

Present a Reading Routine

- Read page 1 aloud with students. Then reread each sentence and have students identify the key facts presented. Continue the sentence-by-sentence routine using other pages. (RF.3.4.b, RF.4.4.b, RF.5.4.b)
- After students read page 2, ask several questions to monitor comprehension. Questions should require students to refer to specific details in the text and/or pictures, such as Why is the mineral called the "watermelon tourmaline"? Tell students that before they answer, they should look back at the text and take care to repeat the exact ideas presented there. (RI.3.1, RI.3.7, SL.3.1.b, RI.4.1, RI.4.7, SL.4.1.b, RI.5.1, SL.5.1.b)

Learning Activities

Provide Activities for Reading

- Read the information in the Introduction on page v about crystal shapes. Have students study the six basic systems shown at the top of the page. Suggest that they look up the words to help them understand the terms. Then have students turn to page 1 and identify the crystal shape (tetragonal) and find the matching shape on page v. (RI.3.1, RI.3.7, RF.3.4, RI.4.1, RI.4.7, RF.4.4, RI.5.1, RI.5.7, RF.5.4)
- After reading about each rock or mineral, have students use information from the text and pictures to give a detailed description of how it looks. Point out that the rocks are shown in color on the cover sections of the book. Then discuss with the group how the pictures help them understand what they read. (RI.3.1, RI.3.7, SL.3.1, RI.4.3, RI.4.7, SL.4.1, SL.5.1)

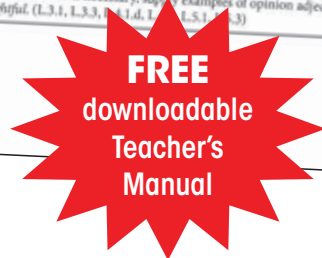

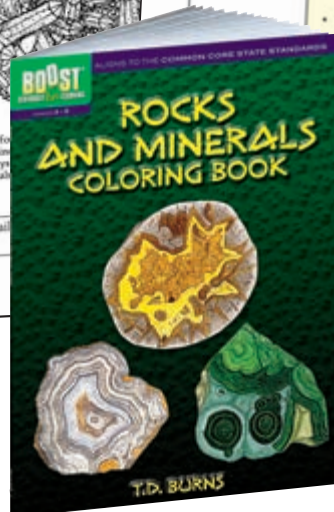

Language Arts

Speaking/Listening: Pair students. Tell them that they will take turns speaking for one minute about a rock or a mineral. After students speak, their partners should verify the formation in the speech. Then have students reverse roles. (SL.3.1, SL.3.4, SL.3.6, SL.4.1, SL.4.4, SL.5.1, SL.5.4)

Language Skills: Direct students to the last sentence on page 1 and read it aloud. Remind them that adjectives are words that describe. Help the class understand that more than one adjective is used to tell about the value of the crystal. Adjectives that describe quality or opinion (significant) come before adjectives that describe origin (commercial) or color (orange). Have students use an adjective for opinion and an adjective for origin or color to describe rocks and minerals in the book. If necessary, supply examples of opinion adjectives such as cute, lovely, and delightful. (L.3.1, L.3.3, RI.4.1, L.5.1, L.5.3)

Excellent rendition of a classic

"We use this book with the third grade class at our school. The illustrations are marvelous and engaging to the children. The fables are told in a way the children can fully grasp the moral of the story. It is a splendid tool for teaching literature as well as common sense, which seems to be at a premium these days."

— Grandmommy, Monroe, LA
